INTRODUCTION TO COLOR THEORY

AUGUST SPEAKER Emily Naff

Like most people with a traditional photography education that began before 2000, Emily Naff started photography working in black and white. While she loved film and her time in the darkroom, she feels she found her true voice in photography when she started working with color.

After graduating from MTSU, she worked in a color lab at Nationwide Studios and Lab, tasked with converting their analog workflow to a digital one. After color correcting over 5,000 photos a week, she learned to spot a color cast in a heartbeat and knew how to correct it.

During Emily's time at Nationwide, she served as a supervisor of the print lab. She loved training new employees, which fed her long-held dream of teaching photography. She left the lab to teach photography at Hillsboro High School.

In 2005, Emily became a full time instructor at Nashville State, teaching the color lab classes along with a variety of other classes as needed. She currently teaches two levels of Color Classes: the first is more technical and delves deeply into the technical aspects of color theory and printing; the other encourages creative applications of color theory and experimental techniques.

For her presentation to NPC, Emily will briefly touch on the technical, then focus intently on the creative application of color theory, discussing ways to make more dynamic photographs using a basic understanding of the psychology of color, as well as the color wheel and how color relationships impact the mood and feel of a photograph. How time of day, weather conditions, and color temperature play into the impact of color in photographs will also be discussed. She finds that some photos work better in black and white, so she'll talk about what to look for to make that decision.

She will share many of her photos taken in The Netherlands, Italy, Brazil, and Japan. She will also discuss her upcoming Travel Photography class offered next year that will take students to Peru in March of 2018.

Hidden Pond Farm for the The Great American Eclipse

August 21, 2017

So long as you are within several miles of the red line (indicating the center path) you will be able to observe totality of the eclipse. The center path of the eclipse runs almost directly over Hidden Pond Farm, offering a prime window to the eclipse, weather permitting.

PROTECT YOUR EYES AND CAMERA WITH PROPER SOLAR FILTERS. Use them while the eclipse is not total, but don't use them while the eclipse is total. It is safe to look directly at the fully eclipsed sun during totality only.

If you do not have proper filters for your camera, DO NOT attempt to take pictures of the eclipse.

DO NOT USE A FLASH OF ANY KIND! You will ruin the dark adaptation of everyone's eyes, and will spoil the show for them all.
